(AP) -- A Christian doctor who allegedly performed medical procedures on women with the goal of delaying their abortions is now on the Kentucky State Board of Medical Licensure's list of doctors who have been disciplined. Dr. Douglas Karpen has not been charged with any crime. But prosecutors are alleging that he committed fraud and made false statements when he performed the treatments on women. Because of the criminal case, the board considered revoking his license on Wednesday, and it voted to put him on probation. Karpen's lawyer says he performed the procedures on the basis of the Christian belief that women who are about to have abortions deserve to have their pregnancies aborted early, and that using fertility drugs or other means to induce an early pregnancy was morally and ethically appropriate
